MARKET COMMENTARY

- Rather mixed economic data from US economy activities, raising the concerns if the mild economic recovery is losing momentum especially after the release of weaker retail sales and unexpected fall in consumer confidence survey.
- Latest industrial production figures in Europe pointed to continued weaknesses were seen across Eurozone while ZEW economic sentiment survey slipped significantly, indicating the Eurozone continued to mire in economic contraction.
- Emerging markets slumped considerably, attributed to disappointed China 1Q 2013 GDP, weaker economic growth while rising inflationary pressures have prompted some central banks paused interest rate cut or be more restrictive on monetary policy.
- As of 30 April 2013, US equities gained 0.11% while European equities rose 1.92% on the back of 0.91% positive returns of world equities.
- Meanwhile, Emerging Markets slipped 1.01%, led by 4.88% decline in Russian equities.
- On local front, FBM KLCI gained 2.61% and reached its all-time highs after the dissolution of Parliament. Boosted by strong foreign buying interest, local equities were on upward trend on the back of rather muted local participation.
