MANAGER'S COMMENTS

United States (US) equities suffered a sell-off during the month of March 2025 (March), with Dow Jones falling by 4.20%, Standard & Poor (S&P) 500 dropping 5.75%, and NASDAQ further plummeting by 8.21%. The escalating geopolitical tensions, such as the new tariff on imports from Canada, Mexico and China, have induced a broad-based weakness in the US equity market as fears of a global trade war have heightened. Concerns regarding possible stagflation grew as widespread layoffs, rising bond yield and uncertain trade policies led to major US indices recording the steepest decline since 2022. In Europe, STOXX Europe 600 had fallen 4.18% in response to the increased concern regarding US tariff imposition on European goods. Japan's equity market followed the trend of the global equity market, declining 4.14% in March as fear of a trade war between its two major trading partners, China and the US, heightened. Conversely, China's equity market defied the trend, as the Hang Seng and Shanghai Composite increased by 0.78% and 0.45%, respectively, however the Shenzhen Composite decreased by 0.99%. Amid mounting uncertainty in global trade, Malaysia's equity market has also continued its downward trend since the beginning of 2025, with the Financial Times Stock Exchange Bursa Malaysia Kuala Lumpur Composite Index (FBMKLCI), FBM EMAS, and FBM Emas Shariah indices dropping by 3.88%, 3.31%, and 2.52%, respectively. This was worsened by the pronounced sell-off by foreign investors, which triggered substantial foreign capital outflow. Trading volume increased by 6.22% to Ringgit Malaysia (RM) 2.70 billion (bn). Commodities had seen a mixed performance in March. Despite forecasts of a crude oil surplus, crude oil prices saw a slight increase of 2.13%, reaching US dollar (USD) 74.74 per barrel. Geopolitical uncertainty also contributed to this modest rise in oil prices. Gold prices continued their significant upward trend in March, surging by 9.63% to USD 3122.8 per ounce. Conversely, crude palm oil had decline by 2.96%, driven by increased supply in Malaysia alongside slower global demand. Malaysian Ringgit strengthen by 0.63%, closing at RM 4.4342 for the month.

Global equity markets experienced a sharp selloff following the tariff announcements made by President Donald Trump during Liberation Day, which came as a surprise to investors and rattled sentiment. Subsequently, the administration introduced a 90-day pause before implementing most of the reciprocal tariffs, prompting a short-term rebound in risk assets. That said, we continue to see a wide range of potential outcomes as trade negotiations evolve across multiple fronts. Recession fears have intensified, and investor confidence in the US as a safe haven in both currency and fixed income markets appears to be eroding. In light of this, we have adopted a more cautious stance until there is greater clarity on US trade policy. Nevertheless, we view current valuations in Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) equities, particularly in Malaysia very attractive at this juncture.
