MARKET COMMENTARY

- Fed's meeting release indicated the divided view among board members over the scale of bond purchase program, its long terms costs on the economic activities and possible early policy. Such remarks sparked the uneasiness among investors worldwide which sent world equities down.
- The inconclusive Italian election results that created hung parliament put the efforts of ECB on test again. Once subsided political risk back to the center stage, propped up the bond yield of Italian and Spanish debts to higher level.
- Policy tightening fears and renewed pledges by Chinese government to curb property prices weighed down on China equities. Market worried on the risk of inflation might move up again and constraint the room of policy easing by PBoC.
- Plagued by such macro risks and policy uncertainties, China and Europe slipped 4.49% and 3.20% in a month. World equities declined 0.6% at the same period.
- On local front, FBM KLCI index gained 0.62%. Local bourse continued trading at weak sentiment while the political risk premium remains as evident near-term risk to local market.
