Asian markets rose on Tuesday, lifted by the biggest jump in Chinese shares in more than two years. Chinese equities rose on hopes of fresh government spending, rebounding from a fourday selloff amid an ongoing trade spat with the US. Gains were led by infrastructure firms that are expected to benefit from fresh stimulus. Elsewhere, Japan's Nikkei share average closed higher, lifted by index heavyweight SoftBank as the company reported solid first-quarter results.

European equities ended higher on Tuesday, as investors cheered positive earnings news, while oil companies and miners also gained on firmer commodity prices. Shares in Italy's UniCredit rose as the lender reported second-quarter results that were better than expectations. The euro bounced from a near sixweek low, while the sterling also recovered after Brexit fears pushed it to an 11-month low.

US equities closed higher on Tuesday, as positive corporate earnings underpinned investor sentiment, outweighing fears over an escalating trade war. The S&P 500 index moved closer to a record high, helped by technology heavyweights Amazon, Alphabet and Microsoft. Financial stocks also gained, buoved by higher yields on the 10-year US Treasury note. Energy stocks were another outperformer, as US sanctions on Iranian goods triggered supply concerns.

US Treasury yields edged up on Tuesday, with the benchmark 10year yield rising by 3 basis points to 2.97%.

Crude oil futures gained after the imposition of US sanctions against Iran took effect on Tuesday, which could tighten global supply. Gold futures edged higher as the dollar eased.
