dailybulletin

Asian stocks were mixed on Thursday as upbeat U.S. data coupled with Fed Chair Janet Yellen's hawkish tone in her last testimony helped spur expectations of a faster pace of Fed rate-hike in 2017. Chinese stocks rose as higher commodity prices and reports of a pick-up in spending on railways and other infrastructure this year boosted material stocks. The Japanese shares retreated as the U.S. dollar slipped against rivals, including the Japanese ven.

Majority of the European markets ended with moderate losses; profit taking played a role in the pullback. Bank stocks turned lower following previous day's rally and mining stocks weakened along with metal prices.

U.S. stocks ended lower as investors expressed some uncertainty about the near-term outlook for the market. Investors were also digesting another batch of U.S. economic data. The labor report showed a modest increase in initial jobless claims to 239,000 in the week ended February 11th. The Commerce Department reported a pullback in housing starts in January, although the report also showed a jump in building permits; housing starts fell by 2.6% to an annual rate of 1.246 million in January.

Gold prices rose on Thursday, reaching its highest since November on mixed economic data and geopolitical tensions. Oil prices rose amid hints that the OPEC will further cut production unless prices move higher.
